Website Connect Meeting
Fri, May 15, 2026

Summary:

The meeting reviewed the website's information architecture, visual issues, and course-page hosting, focusing on fixes to improve user clarity and conversion. Participants agreed on immediate, near-term, and longer-term workstreams and responsibilities.

Navigation and user flow: The team identified the top navigation as hiding key items (courses and the free clarity-call booking) and agreed making those visible is a high-priority, straightforward fix. The desired user decision flow is three clear options: one-on-one booking, course booking, or a free clarity call. Pages should use concise course/service overviews with "learn more" expansion to reduce scrolling and on-page wordiness.

Pop-ups, forms, and lead routing: Two site pop-ups were reviewed: a mailing-list signup that must route to MailChimp and a contact/book flow that currently jumps to the clarity-call booking. The mailing-list routing needs confirmation to preserve leads.

Content and visuals: Nicole liked the site's look but flagged elements that appear off-center, heavy body text that cheapens typography, and an outdated logo that should be removed. A smaller "stamp" logo needs a font update later but is lower priority. The team discussed placing testimonials directly on service pages and adding a short homepage "clarity" video; Nicole will record the video in landscape/YouTube format and deliver it.

Course pages and platform consistency: Course pages and order forms on system.io were judged inconsistent and unprofessional. Nicole is open to migrating platforms if it reduces cost and improves functionality. Leornadia will research alternative hosting/platform options and report findings; platform choice and course-page standardization remain open issues.

Assignments and tools: Leornadia offered to implement the functional fixes and investigate platform alternatives and logo adjustments. Nicole is responsible for producing the homepage video and sharing a site report. A participant noted Read AI installation plans; Leornadia intends to install it and another participant offered to test subscription limits.

Chapters & Topics:

Opening and attendance

The call opened with greetings and brief status updates. One participant said they needed to step away for a client call but would remain connected while leaving the meeting to continue without them.

Goals and priorities for the site

Leornadia asked which website changes Nicole wanted prioritized and offered to share a site report after the meeting. Nicole explained her overarching goals: clarify the client pathway, make booking options and service choices obvious, and reduce on-page verbosity while preserving detail via collapsible sections.

- * The primary website goal is to make the client pathway and booking choices clear and scannable for visitors.
- * The top navigation currently hides important items (courses and clarity-call booking) and should be fixed as a high-priority task.

Navigation, services, and content layout

The participants reviewed specific layout issues: the top toolbar/menu hides courses and the clarity-call booking, service listings and course pages are too long and need condensed overview lists with drop-downs, and testimonials should be woven into pages rather than separated into a single tab.

- * Testimonials should be integrated into service and course pages rather than only on a separate testimony tab.
- * Service and course content should be condensed into overview lists with collapsible “learn more” details to reduce scrolling and information overload.

Homepage media and video format

Leornadia proposed placing a clarity video on the homepage and advised Nicole on recording format; Nicole agreed to record the video soon and asked about acceptable formats, with Leornadia recommending a landscape/YouTube-style format rather than an Instagram portrait format.

- * A short homepage clarity video is desired; Nicole agreed to record and provide the video.

Pop-ups, mailing list routing, and system integrations

The team discussed two pop-ups: a mailing-list subscription pop-up that should route to MailChimp, and a contact/“let’s connect” flow that presently jumps to booking a clarity call; they agreed to confirm the MailChimp mapping so leads are captured, and noted confusion between Wix and MailChimp integrations.

- * The mailing-list pop-up must route to MailChimp so leads are captured correctly.

Course pages, system.io order forms, and platform discussion

Nicole described inconsistent, unprofessional-looking order pages hosted on system.io and expressed willingness to change platforms to reduce cost and improve function; Leornadia said she would research alternative hosting and report back, noting hosting costs and where the site is hosted are central considerations.

- * The system.io order pages currently look inconsistent and need visual standardization in a later phase.
- * Leornadia will research website hosting or platform alternatives (e.g., away from Wix) to reduce cost and improve functionality.

Visual feedback on page layout and typography

Nicole reviewed the page aesthetics, expressing that she liked the overall look but felt elements were off-center and too two-dimensional and that the body font and dense wording made the design look cheap; she preferred less text and a cleaner presentation.

- * Nicole prefers the current page aesthetic but wants added dynamism and fewer dense text blocks to avoid a cheap appearance

Logo decisions and stamp mark

Nicole and Leornadia discussed which logos to use; Leornadia asked whether to keep the current or old logo and Nicole requested removal of the old logo and noted her current logo was a Canvas creation; they also discussed updating a smaller “stamp” logo to match the current font for social and handouts, labeling that as non-urgent.

- * The old logo will be removed from the site because Nicole confirmed it should go

Prioritizing functionality and calls to action

Leornadia emphasized focusing first on site function and clarity, stressing that each page should include a clear call to action to guide bookings and course enrollment, and both parties agreed courses need better attention.

- * Leornadia will investigate the smaller “stamp” logo after the primary site functionality is in place

- * Leornadia will prioritize core site functionality and clear calls to action on every page to drive bookings and course enrollment

Timeline and deliverables

Leornadia committed to starting work next week, promised to share the site draft for Nicole's feedback when complete, and Nicole confirmed she will share a related report; Leornadia noted she had been preparing the report and would send it when finished.

- * Leornadia will start working on the site next week and will share a draft for Nicole's review

- * Nicole will share her report with Leornadia to inform design and content updates

Video recording and responsibility

Leornadia said she would try to record the required video and warned not to panic if it does not fit the first phase; Nicole acknowledged the video is her responsibility to deliver and said she would attempt to provide it.

Closing logistics and Read AI

The meeting closed with requests to share the recording and a brief technical exchange where Neo asked if Leornadia had Read AI; Leornadia said she would install it that week and Neo said he would test or subscribe to work around free-version limits.

- * Leornadia plans to install Read AI that week to assist with meeting assets and Neo will explore subscription options if needed

Action Items:

- * Leornadia will fix the menu/toolbar so courses and clarity-call booking are visible and accessible.

- * Leornadia will add the clarity video to the homepage and update the about and related pages as specified.

- * Nicole will record and send the short clarity video in landscape/YouTube format for homepage use.
- * Leornadia will check that the mailing-list pop-up routes to MailChimp and confirm the mapping with Nicole.
- * Leornadia will research alternative hosting/platform options (including costs and implications for current integrations) and report findings to Nicole.
- * Leornadia Jose will remove the old logo from the website
- * Leornadia Jose will look into updating the small “stamp” logo after the website’s primary functionality is completed
- * Leornadia Jose will start working on the website next week
- * Leornadia Jose will share the website draft for Nicole Trautman to review and provide feedback
- * Nicole Trautman will share her report with Leornadia Jose
- * Leornadia Jose will try to record the required video for the project
- * Leornadia Jose will install Read AI this week
